Women's March Global Invites Women to Speak Out Against Violence

The organisation aims to empower women through sharing and storytelling

WORLD | February 1 - After bringing together women and allies in over 80 events across 31 countries for the Women's Wave Anniversary March, Women's March Global is continuing their mission to end gender-based violence. As the first action of the organisation's 5 Actions to #EndGBV, Our Story invites women and allies to share their experiences of gender-based violence.

In partnership with World Pulse and Jasmin Kaur, women and allies around the world are being called upon to break their silence and bravely tell their stories of gender-based violence in order to bring global attention to this pervasive issue.

"By sharing our experiences we bring gender-based violence to the forefront of the conversation," said Women's March Global Interim Executive Director Uma Mishra-Newbery. "When we bring our stories into the light, we empower others to do the same. Together we can become a wave of voices too loud to ignore."

Stories can be submitted in four ways:

- Medium: Story Submission Form
- Twitter: Use the hashtag #OurStory
- Facebook Page: Tag @womensmarchglobal
- Instagram: Tag @womensmarchglobal

World Pulse, the global women's storytelling and networking platform for change, will use their extensive network of storytellers to amplify the powerful accounts of the violence women around the world experience every day.

Every Wednesday in the month of February, writer, illustrator and spoken word artist Jasmin Kaur will be hosting a webinar on the Women's March Global Facebook page about stories of gender-based violence survivors and the importance of sharing their stories. Published by Harper's Bazaar India, NR Magazine, KaurLife Magazine, and Sikh Formations Journal among others, Kaur's innovative voice will provide brilliant insight into storytelling, healing and reclaiming identity.
