Women's March Global to Announce New Interim Executive Director

Uma Mishra-Newbery will be stepping in at the interim Executive Director as Lara Stein moves to an advisory board role.

WORLD | 30 November 2018 - Today Women's March Global announced key organizational changes to the leadership team. Lara Stein will be moving from the Executive Director of Women's March Global to an advisory board role with the organization. As Women's March Global is quickly growing, Stein's extensive knowledge and expertise can be best utilized at the board level. Stein will use her valuable leadership experience as the founder and director of the TEDx, Managing Director at Singularity University, and senior level employee at Microsoft's MSN, WGBH, Marvel, iXL among other organizations to continue to positively impact Women's March Global.

Uma Mishra-Newbery will be stepping in as interim Executive Director as of November 29, 2018. Women's March Global places great importance on the grassroots levels of their organization making the former Director of Global Community a logical choice.

"I joined Women's March Global because I wanted to use my experience designing global systems, products, communities and movements make a positive impact on the world around me and be a part of an organization with limitless potential for positive change. I am delighted to continue to contribute from an advisory board role," shared Stein. "I have had the opportunity to watch Uma succeed over the last year and I am convinced that there is no better leader for Women's March Global."

Mishra-Newbery is a proud U.S. Army veteran passionate about service and a strong believer that human action can influence society. As Director of Global Community, Mishra-Newbery built and maintained connections and communications between chapters and partner organizations and utilized strategic partnerships to build the programmatic direction of WM Global. Mishra-Newbery's strong focus on community and connection will benefit the grassroots nature of Women's March Global.

"I am delighted to take on this next chapter," said Mishra-Newbery. "I have admired Lara and her incredible work and vision as Executive Director of Women's March Global. I welcome this new and exciting challenge, and look forward to the continued joining together of people across the globe as we work towards equality, empowerment and connection."
