FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Women's March Global Launches End Violence Against Women Toolkit

Women's March Global launches toolkit to emphasize the gross atrocities and struggles faced by women and girls all over the world.

World | 11 December 2018 - Women's March Global is proud to release a comprehensive resource designed to educate and inspire individuals around the world. Through the toolkit, Women's March Global aims to provide the global community a perspective into the recent statistics and laws of the various types of violence faced by women. It lays the foundation to our second-anniversary march and the why and for whom we March.

One in three women and girls experience physical and/or sexual intimate partner violence or non-partner sexual violence in their lifetime. However, violence against women goes beyond the interpersonal, direct violence that is captured in gender-based violence research and advocacy like domestic abuse, rape, femicides. The institutional, indirect, and state-sanctioned violence is also at the core of the varying forms of violence that women directly experience.

"By understanding the interconnectedness of how policies, laws, and misogyny impact women, we can work to collectively break down the systems that support recurring violence against women, shared Interim Executive Director Uma Mishra-Newbery. "A complex web of social norms, institutional practices, and cultural values weaves its way through the entirety of women's lives, and Women's March Global's new toolkit will make this information and research easily accessible and shareable."

The toolkit is arriving in time for the upcoming Women's March Global anniversary event on 19 and 20 January 2019. Join us in solidarity with the Women's Wave and speak out for the rights, freedom, and justice for women and allies everywhere.
